

Table of Contents

Introduction	11
1 Music Therapy, an Integrative Procedure	13
1.1 Music, the Central Medium in Music Therapy	13
1.2 Music Therapy, from Diversity to Independent Discipline.	17
1.3 Music Therapy Elements Borrowed from Psychodrama	19
Scene building in music therapy	19
Scene playing and the handling of roles in music therapy	20
2 What is Psychodrama?	21
2.1 Social, Creative, and Spontaneous	21
Moreno’s anthropological view of man	21
2.2 “Tele”, “Tele Process” and “Tele Relationship”	22
Tele, transference and empathy.	23
Tele and role exchange	24
2.3 Roles and Role Categories	24
Roles	25
Role clusters	25
Moreno’s role categories and their counterparts in other concepts (Daniel Stern and Fritz Hegi)	25
2.4 Important Concepts in Psychodrama Work	28
2.5 The Depth Psychology Background of Psychodrama	32
3 Parallels between Music Therapy and Psychodrama	33
3.1 Psychodrama Elements and their Parallels in Music Therapy	34
3.2 Moreno’s Tele in Psychodrama and the Concept of Resonance in Music Therapy	35
3.3 Tele and Synchronization	36
3.4 Tele, Resonance and Diagnostics	37
3.5 Tele, Resonance and Spirituality	38
Example from practice in Neuro-Rehabilitation: rebuilding tele, meaning of life and synchronization.	38
3.6 Spontaneity, Creativity and Conserves.	41
4 Overview of Effects and Functions of Psychodrama Elements in Music Therapy	43
4.1 Overview of Effects and Functions of Elements.	44
4.2 Detailed Example of the Use of Psychodrama Elements in Music Therapy Example from practice using integration of psychodrama elements for a child Music Therapy in Youth Psychiatry.	45
4.3 Reflections on the Contributions of Both Methods.	52

5	Music Therapy with Psychodrama Session Structures	55
5.1	Session Design in Three Acts	55
5.2	Warm-Up.	56
5.3	The Play	56
5.4	The Sharing/Feedback Round	57
	Sharing	58
	Effects and functions of sharing	59
	Example from practice with a music therapy group: Sharing brings repressed emotions/events to light.	59
	Play modes for sharing	60
	Feedback.	61
	Effects and functions of feedback	62
	Forms of play for feedback.	62
5.5	Protocols of Music Therapy Sessions with Three-act Psychodrama. . .	64
6	“Warm-up” in Music Therapy Based on Psychodramatic Role Theory	69
6.1	Somatic Warm-up	70
	Example from practice with a children’s music therapy group	71
	Play modes for somatic warm-up	73
6.2	Psychological (Mental) Warm-up.	75
	Example from practice: mental warm-up by a member of a music therapy encounter group	75
	Play modes for mental warm-up.	76
6.3	Social Warm-up	78
	Example from practice of a warm-up at the beginning of a workshop at an international congress.	78
	Play modes for social warm-up	79
	Play modes for group formation.	80
6.4	Transcendental Warm-up	83
	Example from practice for transcendental warm-up with a children’s music therapy group.	84
	Example from practice: transcendental warm-up with a group of adults.	84
	Play modes for transcendental warm-up	86
6.5	Overview of Valid Musical Means for Targeted Warm-up	92
7	Stage and Spectator Area	93
	Example from children’s music therapy practice: transition between different spaces	94
8	Scene Setting in Music Therapy	97
	Steps for scene setting.	98
	Example from a family therapy practice: insight from scene setting and scene change	98

9	Scene Change in Music Therapy	101
	Example from therapy practice with a 17-year-old adolescent:
	Recognition of behavior patterns and projections through scene changes	101
	Example from couples therapy practice: “Who sets the agenda?”
	Scene change uncovers dysfunctional behavior patterns	102
	Example from practice with a group in professional training: “I don’t want to be part of it, or do I?”
	Scene change from pain scenes to wish scenes allows the first step towards changing dysfunctional behavior patterns	103
	Play forms for scene changes in music therapy correspond to new musical movements	104
10	Role Clusters in Music Therapy.	107
	Example from music therapy practice with an 11-year-old girl:
	work with role clusters for the analysis of school problems	108
	Play modes for role clusters	109
11	Role Reversal/Role Exchange and Doubling/Mirroring in Music Therapy	113
11.1	Role Reversal.	113
11.2	Role Exchange	114
	Play modes with role exchange in music therapy	114
11.3	“Doubling” and “Mirroring”	116
	Play modes for mirroring in music therapy	116
12	Sociometry in Music Therapy	119
12.1	Promoting a degree of familiarity in groups	119
	Sociometric play modes to improve familiarity	119
12.2	Revealing Group Structures.	120
	Example from practice of sociometric music therapeutic integration work. Excerpt from therapy with a child (School Psychology Service)	120
	Sociometric forms of play to reveal group structures.	122
12.3	Group Energy	123
	Example from practice with a 56-year-old woman whose mother-issue is not chosen by the group	124
	Approaches for exposing group energy	125

13	The “Social Atom” in Music Therapy	127
13.1	The Social Atom in Individual Therapy	127
13.2	The Social Atom in Group Music Therapy	128
	Play modes for the social atom in group music therapy	128
13.3	The Social Atom as a Diagnostic Tool	130
	Example from practice: drawing of an unusual social atom	130
	Example from practice: social atom of a mother with a disabled daughter	131
14	The Cultural Atom	133
	Example from practice: Cultural atom of a music therapy student.	133
	Example from practice of a cultural atom: a patient with burnout syndrome	134
	Example from practice: the cultural atom of a patient with depressive disorder	134
	Play modes for the cultural atom in music therapy.	135
15	Processing	137
15.1	The Process Assembly.	137
	Example from practice from an encounter course with music therapists	137
15.2	The Process Drawing	139
16	Music Therapy and Psychodrama: A Productive Pair	141
	List of Tables and Figures	143
	Bibliography	145
	English Bibliography	148
	Index	149