

Preface

This book is the revised version of my PhD thesis, submitted at the Ludwig-Maximilians-Universität München in November 2009. First of all, I thank my supervisors, Rolf M. Schneider and Richard Miles for their invaluable advice, help and support in many respects, as well as Franz Alto Bauer, whose assistance, and not at least advocacy in support of the publication of this book, have been very welcome. I benefitted very much from my membership in the Graduate School ‘Prestige in Ancient Cultures’, funded by the DFG, based in Munich. Generous support allowed me to spend a good deal of my dissertation at the University of Cambridge, so that I could fully enjoy the fruits of international co-supervision. Richard Miles first introduced me to the archaeology and history of late antique North Africa on his excavation at Bir Messaouda in Carthage over the course of four years, for which I am most grateful. Many colleagues have helped to shape my image of late antique North Africa over the last years, some of whom have become friends, most of all: Guido Berndt, Roland Steinacher, Philipp von Rummel and Anna Leone. I am grateful for discussions with Jonathan Conant, Andy Merrills, F. M. Clover, Walter Pohl, Michael Kulikowski, Guy Halsall and Gareth Sears that have helped me in different ways. Shortly before submission in late 2009, Richard Miles and Andy Merrills provided me with a preliminary printout of their 2010 ‘The Vandals’, which was of invaluable help in the final stages of completion. I have re-worked parts of the original version of my PhD dissertation, however, I have not integrated new work that appeared after later 2009 into this book. I am most grateful to Richard Neal and Jonathan Long who took the challenge to correct my English. Finally, I thank Ursula Reichert for adding this book to the series, and Miriam Würfel at Reichert Verlag for her help in putting this monograph into being. I dedicate this work to my family, especially my parents, and most of all to the memory of my father.

Rome, October 2012